Sturgeon and paddlefish - freshwater fish have existed for hundreds of millions of years - now face extinction mainly (21) ..... the illegal trade in wild-caught caviar and meat. The world's first comprehensive assessment of the species in over 13 years, released today by the International Union for Conservation of Nature (IUCN), confirmed that all 26 remaining species are now threatened with extinction.

The new assessment highlights that (22) ..... two-thirds of sturgeon and paddlefish species are now critically endangered on the IUCN Red List of Threatened Species, (23) ..... makes them among the world's most threatened species. The assessment also officially declares the extinction of the Chinese paddlefish, the extinction in the wild of the Yangtze sturgeon.

Poaching sturgeon for the illegal trade in wild-caught caviar and meat is one of the leading causes of their extinction. Last year, WWF revealed that one-third of caviar and meat products sold in the lower Danube region were sold illegally. Hydropower dams blocking migration routes, unsustainable mining destroying (24) ..... grounds, and habitat loss are other major threats to the species.

IUCN, the World Sturgeon Conservation Society, and WWF are working with partners to safeguard these species through (25) ..... research, raising awareness, and directly engaging in conservation projects to shorten the gap between science and management.

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C or D to indicate the correct answer to each of the following questions from 26 to 30.

Lifelong learning is an essential part of personal and professional development. It is a continuous process that helps individuals stay relevant in their fields, keep up with changes in trends and adapt to uncertainty.

Curiosity is the spark that ignites the fire of learning. It is the desire to explore, question and discover new knowledge and experiences, which is required for lifelong learning. Albert Einstein is often credited with saying, "I have no special talents. I am only passionately curious."

Curiosity is the fuel that makes individuals seek out new information, skills and perspectives.

Curious people listen and approach interactions with the hope of learning something valuable. When someone is sincerely interested in something, they tend to listen more closely - determined to uncover the facts, seek out answers and pile up deep knowledge along the way.

With more information and details at their disposal, they tend to be more motivated, more focused and, ultimately, more productive. Research also shows "curiosity to be associated with higher levels of positive emotions, lower levels of anxiety, and more satisfaction with life." However, curiosity is only the driving force for the journey of lifelong learning.
