Read the following passage about remote work and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 1 to 8.

Working from home has become increasingly common, providing employees with greater flexibility and control over their work environments. Without the need for long commutes, people have more time for family, personal interests, or simply to rest. A personalized workspace at home can also lead to higher productivity, as individuals can adjust their surroundings to suit their needs. Many companies now support remote work, recognizing its benefits for both employee well-being and business outcomes.

However, working from home does bring certain challenges. For example, while remote work can boost productivity, some people find it hard to stay focused without the structure of an office setting. There's also a risk of isolation, as virtual meetings don't always fully replace face-to-face interactions. However, companies are increasingly devising creative strategies to mitigate these drawbacks, using sophisticated collaboration tools and arranging virtual social activities to preserve a sense of team cohesion.

Another difficulty with working from home is the blurred line between work and personal life. With workspaces merged into the home environment, the temptation to check emails or tackle tasks outside of regular hours can lead to an "always-on" mentality. Setting clear schedules and defining specific working hours is essential to ensure a healthy balance.

Looking forward, remote work is likely to remain a popular choice, supported by ever-advancing technology. Many companies are considering hybrid models, allowing employees to split their time between home and office. This flexible approach can balance the productivity of remote work with the social and collaborative benefits of in-person interactions. As remote work continues to evolve, it will reshape traditional work culture, requiring adaptation from both businesses and employees.

Read the following passage about parent-child relationships and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 21 to 30.

[I] In recent years, the relationship between parents and children has profoundly changed. The decision about whether or not to have children is voluntary. [II] Adults who choose to be "child-free" are no longer dismissed as shallow or self-absorbed. [III] As a result, for most adults, having a child is a deliberate and purposeful decision, representing a conscious choice to assume the responsibilities of parenting. [IV]

Parenting has become more complex compared to the past. Parents today are bombarded with conflicting advice about various aspects of child-rearing, such as breastfeeding, sleep arrangements, and toilet training. Without clear guidelines from experts like Dr. Benjamin, moms and dads must decide for themselves how to rear their children. Parenting labels like attachment parenting, natural parenting, and positive parenting further complicate the decision-making process, leaving parents uncertain about the best way to raise their children.

At the same time, parents have grown more sensitive to the risks their children face, both physical and psychological. Anxiety defines modern parenting, from concerns about birth defects to children's safety. Media reports about the dangers of pedophiles, stranger abductions, bullying, and environmental hazards heighten these fears, leading to greater adult supervision and less freedom for children.

Finally, there has been a significant reversal in parental expectations. In the past, parents expected their children to love them, but today, parents seek to ensure that their children are happy and love them back. As work commitments increase, a sense of guilt often sours parent-child relationships, causing many parents to overcompensate by investing more time and resources in their children's development.

In conclusion, modern parenting has grown more complex due to shifting attitudes, conflicting advice, and heightened anxieties about children's well-being. Parents today face increasing pressures to balance guidance, independence, and emotional connection while navigating evolving expectations. Despite these challenges, their dedication to raising happy, well-adjusted children remains strong, shaping the future of parent-child relationships.

Question 28. Which of the following best summarizes paragraph 2?

- A. With clear expert guidelines, parenting labels simplify decisions, making parents certain about the best child-rearing approach.
B. Parenting is now more complex due to conflicting advice, unclear expert guidance, and diverse parenting styles.
C. Constant conflicts about good parenting make child-rearing decisions increasingly complicated for parents.
D. Various approaches to child-rearing choices add complexity, leaving parents unsure about positive parenting styles.

Question 29. Which of the following can be inferred from the passage?

- A. Parenting is often an unplanned decision, with many individuals becoming parents without considering the responsibilities involved.
B. The media's influence has heightened parental fears, resulting in greater control and less independence for children.
C. Parenting in the past was characterized by a greater emotional gap between parents and their children.
D. Parental guilt has gradually decreased as modern parents dedicate more time and resources to their children.

Question 30. Which of the following best summarizes the passage?

- A. Parenting today focuses less on maintaining strict control, as modern parents increasingly respond to growing societal pressures and expectations to prioritize their children's overall happiness.
B. Modern parenting is highly complex, requiring parents to manage conflicting advice, increased safety concerns, and evolving societal expectations that influence the dynamics of the parent-child relationship.
C. Despite the rise of media-driven anxieties, modern parents are more focused on ensuring their children's emotional stability than advertising concerns about physical safety or social expectations.
D. The choice to become a parent is more deliberate today, but abundant advice has eased parenting challenges, despite persistent concerns about children's overall well-being.

Read the following passage about renewable energy and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the option that best fits each of the numbered blanks from 36 to 40.

As the world seeks sustainable solutions to energy needs, renewable energy sources such as wind, solar, and hydroelectric power are gaining popularity. Solar panels and wind turbines, which have been installed to reduce dependency on fossil fuels, are now common sights in many countries. (36) _____.

One of the key advantages of renewable energy is its minimal environmental impact. Unlike fossil fuels, (37) _____, renewable sources produce little to no emissions. This makes them a vital part of global efforts to reduce pollution, protect ecosystems, and promote a cleaner planet.

Another benefit of renewable energy is its potential to provide energy security. (38) _____. Since renewable sources are naturally replenished, they offer a stable and endless supply of power, unlike non-renewable resources that may eventually run out.

(39) _____. This has led to a rise in green jobs across various industries. These jobs include positions in manufacturing, installation, and maintenance, which contribute to local economies and provide opportunities for a skilled workforce.

Governments globally are supporting the transition to renewable energy. Policies and incentives (40) _____. These measures reflect a commitment to sustainable development.

Question 36.

- A. By generating electricity without producing greenhouse gas emissions using natural resources, we can help combat climate change.
- B. With electricity generated by using natural resources without releasing greenhouse gases, the effects of climate change will be reduced.
- C. These technologies use natural resources to produce electricity without emitting greenhouse gases, helping to combat climate change.
- D. Fossil fuels are still dominant so innovative technology for electricity generation is used to combat climate change.

Question 37.

- A. relying heavily on energy from the sun and wind
- B. which increase the demand for energy-saving solutions
- C. which contribute to air pollution and climate change
- D. known for their potential to reduce carbon footprint

Question 38.

- A. Renewables prevent environmental damage caused by oil spills
- B. Solar and wind power facilities can be built in remote areas
- C. Many industries are investing in clean energy solutions
- D. This security makes renewables a reliable energy option

Question 39.

- A. Many multi-national companies still rely on non-renewable energy sources
- B. Renewable energy also stimulates economic growth by creating new jobs
- C. Green jobs urgently require extensive training and expertise
- D. The shift to renewable energy decreases the demand for workers in the traditional energy sector

Question 40.

- A. being carried out need to encourage green technology development
- B. implemented can completely reverse the advancement in the green technology sector
- C. are being implemented to foster the development of green technology
- D. of which the development of green technology is gradually stimulated
