How do you remember things for a test?

Nancy: "One day during a test, I remembered something because I remembered the music which I listened to while I studied that point. Now, I choose a song for each important point. During the test, I just think of the song and I can remember all the facts. I pass every test now."

Delia: "I put the heading for each area on a different piece of paper, and then I write the important information under each heading. Then I put the pieces of paper up around my bedroom. In the test, I think about my bedroom and I say to myself, 'This information is on my clothes cupboard.' I see a picture in my head and remember everything. Well, actually, I was disappointed in the last test. I only remembered the headings!"

Emma: "I write the most important word or phrase, like 'Vietnam', in the middle of a big piece of paper. Then I write headings around it, like 'Area' in red or 'Cities' in green. And then I write the important facts under each heading in the same color. During the test, I see pictures in my head of all the main words, and that helps me to remember the important facts. It really works!"
