Read the following passage about coffee and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 23 to 30.

I just finished watching the Harry Potter series by J.K. Rowling, and I am very impressed! The story is about a young boy, Harry, who learns he is a wizard and goes to a magical school called Hogwarts. He makes friends with his two life-long best friends, Hermione and Ron, who help him on his journey. Each movie shows Harry growing up and learning more about his world, where there are exciting magical creatures, spells, and mysteries.

The main conflict is between Harry and a dark wizard named Voldemort, who wants to take over the magical world. Every movie builds up the story and shows more about Harry's past and his connection to Voldemort. I enjoyed watching Harry face different challenges in each movie, getting stronger and braver with each one. The final movie was very exciting, with an intense battle between good and evil.

The series has amazing special effects, making the magic look real. The actors did a great job showing the emotions of their characters. I felt like I was right there with them in every scene! This series has a lot of important themes, like friendship, bravery, and love. I think both kids and adults can enjoy this series, as it has something for everyone.

Overall, Harry Potter is a wonderful series full of magic, adventure, and heart. I would recommend it to anyone who enjoys a good fantasy story. Watching the entire series was an amazing experience that I will remember for a long time!

Read the following passage about powering and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 31 to 40.

Six months after the UN officially recognized the human right to a healthy environment, a report by UN Special Rapporteur David Boyd underscores the harsh reality that this right remains inaccessible to many, particularly the most vulnerable populations worldwide. Boyd's report identifies "sacrifice zones," regions where pollution from industrial activities has rendered the air, water, and soil toxic, exposing local communities to severe health risks like cancer, lead poisoning, and respiratory diseases.

Globally, there are thousands of such zones. For instance, Bor, Serbia, ranks among Europe's most polluted cities due to its copper mining and smelting industries, leaving 80% of its metallurgical workers with chronic illnesses. In La Oroya, Peru, nearly all children living near a lead smelter show dangerously high blood lead levels. Similarly, in the oil-contaminated Niger Delta of Nigeria, life expectancy hovers around just 40 years. These regions reflect the dire costs of prioritizing industrial progress over environmental health.

Boyd's findings emphasize the role of corporate practices in exacerbating these crises. [I] Major polluters, including leading fossil fuel companies, continue profiting massively while contributing to pollution and climate change. [II] During the energy crisis in 2022, six such corporations amassed $350 billion in profits. [III] Simultaneously, lobbying and greenwashing tactics hinder the enactment of strict environmental laws, enabling the persistence of these toxic zones. [IV]

Governments also bear responsibility for failing to counteract these influences. Corporate lobbying and the absence of enforceable environmental regulations perpetuate these issues, as evidenced by recent climate negotiations that yielded weak commitments. Boyd advocates for bold action, including legally binding frameworks to hold corporations accountable, criminalizing greenwashing, and reducing corporate influence in policymaking. Such measures are critical for turning the human right to a healthy environment from principle to practice, safeguarding both people and the planet
