V. Read the following passage and tick True or False for each statement. (1 p)

Japanese secondary students study typical subjects: maths, English, history, biology, chemistry, and PE. A student normally studies ten to fourteen subjects. Students start their first class at half past eight. There are about thirty students in each class.

Students are in the same classroom all day. The teacher goes from one classroom to another at the start and end of the class, not the students.

At the start and end of the class, the students stand for the teacher. When the teacher goes, the students talk with their friends for ten minutes and take their books out of their desks for the next class.

The students have lunch in their classroom. They have cold lunch made at home by their parents, or they have a hot lunch made at school. Lunch is forty-five minutes and there is no other break, except the ten minutes at the end of the class.

Japanese students finish classes at quarter to four. But when they finish, they clean the desks, the windows and the board. After they finish class, the students go to after-school clubs.
