Audio script – Part 1

Listen to the effects of climate change and fill in each blank with NO MORE THAN TWO WORDS AND/ OR A NUMBER.

Climate change also contributes to another dangerous problem - melting polar icecaps, which in turn causes rising sea levels. According to the National River Conservation Directorate, average temperatures in the Arctic region are rising twice as fast they are elsewhere, and the ice is melting and rupturing. NASA satellite images reveal that the area of our permanent ice cover is shrinking at a rate of 9% every decade. At that rate, the Arctic could be totally ice-free in the summer season within decades.

And if all of that ice melted, where would it go? You guessed it - our oceans. You might think that rising tides are only a problem for people in a few isolated areas, but major cities like New York and London could be underwater if we don't do something soon. Manhattan alone has already dreamt up ways to deal with the potential rising tides over the next few years but coming up with solutions after the fact is not enough. In order to reverse the melting of polar icecaps, we have to start at the root of the problem. It's important to be aware of climate change, and to learn what we can do personally to keep global warming from continuing on its deadly course.

Listen to the benefits of learning online and choose the best option to answer each of the following questions

Online learning has been on the rise in recent years, and it's not hard to see why eLearning courses have become hugely popular by the simple virtue of being so much more convenient than traditional face-to -face courses.

Students can engage with multimedia content and learning materials at whatever time is most convenient to them. They don't have to travel anywhere to study, they can simply log in to the virtual campus from the comfort of their own home or office.

There's a second reason why online learning has become so popular: it's cheaper. Cost can often be a prohibitive factor in why individual students don't enrol in courses they're interested in. This is also an issue for corporations who wish to encourage their employees to undergo further training but don't have much of a budget for conferences and training courses. Online courses are easily accessible on much smaller budgets.

Many students are turning to online learning courses because they have become a better way to learn. Those students who are serious about improving their understanding, learning new skills and gaining valuable qualifications are keen to enroll in the type of course that will be the most effective.

2. Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions.

Tourism will always have an impact on the places visited. Sometimes the impact is good, but often it is negative. For example, if lots of people visit one place, then this can damage the environment. The question is - how can we minimize the problems without preventing people from travelling and visiting places?

The main aim of ecotourism is to reduce the negative impact that tourism has on the environment and local people. The idea is to encourage tourists to think about what they do when they visit a place.

It's great to talk about protecting the environment, but how do you actually do this? There are a number of key points. Tourists shouldn't drop litter, they should stay on the paths, they shouldn't interfere with wildlife and they should respect local customs and traditions.

Some people see ecotourism as a contradiction. They say that any tourism needs infrastructure - roads, airports and hotels. The more tourists that visit a place, the more of these are needed and, by building more of these, you can't avoid damaging the environment.

But, of course, things aren't so black and white. Living in a place of natural beauty doesn't mean that you shouldn't benefit from things like better roads. As long as the improvements benefit the local people and not just the tourists, and the local communities are consulted on plans and changes, then is there really a problem?

In 2002 the United Nations celebrated the "International Year of Ecotourism". Over the past twenty years, more and more people have started taking eco-holidays. In countries such as Ecuador, Nepal, Costa Rica and Kenya, ecotourism represents a significant part of the tourist industry.
