"Đất Rừng Phương Nam," based on the novel by Đoàn Giỏi, tells the story of An, a young boy who loses his mother during the turbulent era of French colonial rule in southern Vietnam [I]. After becoming separated from his father, An sets out on a journey across the wild and untamed landscapes of the southern region, hoping to find his family and a place to belong [II]. He is a brave and fearless kid who is always ready to face challenges [III]. As he travels alone, An is taken in by kind-hearted villagers and encounters a series of colorful characters, including fishermen, hunters, and revolutionaries who are resisting colonial rule. [IV]

The film captures the raw beauty of the southern landscape, with its dense mangrove forests, winding rivers, and diverse wildlife. An learns to navigate the challenges of the wild, from fishing in the broad rivers to facing dangerous animals like snakes and crocodiles. The forest is both a sanctuary and a threat, with its deep shadows and hidden dangers. Yet, it is also a place of wonder, where An experiences the thrill of nature's mysteries and the warmth of human connection.

Beyond his adventures, An witnesses the courage and spirit of solidarity of the southern people. The movie highlights their way of life—their fishing traditions, food, folk tales, and love for the land. It also explores the theme of resistance, as the people fight against the injustices of colonial power. Through his journey, An grows in strength and understanding, finding hope and courage despite the hardships he faces. "Đất Rừng Phương Nam" is a powerful tale of survival, the strength of community, and the spirit of southern Vietnam.
