What is a disaster?

We can use the word 'disaster' in normal conversation. If we say, 'My project was a disaster', we (23) _____ that many things went wrong. But when we use the word to talk about natural disasters, (24) _____ earthquakes, tsunamis, and typhoons, it has a very different meaning.

Scientists say that there are over 50 earthquakes every day somewhere in the world, but not all of these earthquakes are disasters. In the same way, most of the 30 typhoons each year are not disasters, (25) _____ they happen far out to sea.

So when does a natural event become a disaster? The most important thing is (26) _____ the height of the waves in a tsunami or the area of land in an earthquake. It is not even the cost of the event in dollars from buildings falling down or roads being damaged.

A disaster is an event in which, unfortunately, a (27) _____ of people die. It is as simple, and sad, as that.

Read the blog from Alison on an environmental website and choose the best answer for each question. (5 questions)

Start your own ...

School Environmental Group!

Everyone wants to do something to protect the environment. Your school is an excellent place to start. It probably wastes lots of things, including electricity, water, and paper. For example, I found that my school pollutes the local area with dirty water.

1. Do your homework!

There are a few questions to answer before you get started.

- Do at least five of your classmates want to start an environmental group?
- Is one of your teachers interested in helping you? If not, it will be very difficult to get your school to help you with a room for meetings, for example, and other things, like letting you make photocopies.
- Are there any environmental groups in other classes? If there are, would they like to join your group? Remember: You are stronger together.

2. Have a team meeting!

Start by asking two questions:

- Why are we here?
- What do we want to do?

People will have different answers to the first question, but unless you have the same answer to the second question, your group will not be successful. Is it the most important thing to you to

- reduce paper waste in the school?
- save electricity?
- find ways to save water?
- do something else?

Good luck!
