Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D to indicate the answer to each of the question from 26 to 30.

Wildlife conservation is all about protecting animals and their natural environments to ensure they can survive and thrive. Many animals are in danger due to human activities. One major threat is deforestation, which happens when forests are cut down for farming or construction. This destruction removes the homes of many animals, leaving them without food and shelter. Another serious problem is pollution. Harmful chemicals from factories and cars can contaminate air, water, and soil, making it dangerous for animals to live. Hunting is also a big concern. Animals are often hunted for their fur, tusks, or other body parts, which can lead to their numbers decreasing and, in some cases, extinction - a situation where an animal species disappears completely.

To address these issues, countries around the world have set up national parks and wildlife reserves. These are protected areas where animals can live safely, away from human disturbances. In these places, animals can find the food and shelter they need to survive and reproduce. Additionally, many zoos and wildlife centers work on breeding programs for endangered species. These programs help increase the number of animals in captivity, and once their populations are healthy enough, some can be reintroduced into the wild.

Education plays a crucial role in wildlife conservation. By learning about the importance of protecting wildlife and their habitats, people are more likely to support conservation efforts. Governments and organizations also create laws to protect animals and their environments. Although there are many challenges in wildlife conservation, continuing these efforts is vital. It helps to ensure that future generations can enjoy a world with a rich variety of animals and natural beauty.

Question 26. What is the main purpose of wildlife conservation?

TAPESCRIPTS

PART 1:

Audioscript

Nam: Hi, Mai. How's your mid-term project going?

Mai: Good! I'm trying to complete it by next Monday. But I'm still working on the last part: saving endangered animals. Do you have any ideas, Nam?

Nam: Well, I think the first thing you should do is help people understand the importance of this problem.

Mai: Yes, I agree. Some people think this is a natural process that would happen with or without humans. They also believe that's not their responsibility.

Nam: You should also do some research on the number of endangered animals. We are losing animals quicker now than ever before. And one of the reasons is illegal hunting.

Mai: Yes, hunting causes a lot of suffering to wild animals. It destroys their natural habitats, and leaves baby animals behind to die.

Nam: Well, I think strict laws can really help. Heavy punishment may prevent people from illegal hunting. Besides, wildlife trade should be banned as well.

Mai: That would stop illegal hunting. Any more ideas, Nam?

Nam: And we should make sure that the souvenirs we buy on holiday are not made from endangered animal parts.

Mai: That's true. Thanks, Nam! You've been so helpful.

PART 2

F: I found out about a website that helps you improve your English.

M: Who told you about it? Sarah from work?

F: (11) Actually I saw an advert during my favourite TV programme, English Fun, the one we used to listen to on the radio.

M: I got tired of it. It got so boring.

F: (12) It's funny you should say that, but the online radio shows are nothing like that. (13) Their clever advice has really helped me.

M: (13) We should tell Ms Jessica about it. My cousin has a lesson with her today. So do you spend a lot of time on it?

F: On Friday I was on it for an hour and a half, (14) yesterday about three quarters of an hour and today maybe I'll find an hour to read some articles.

M: Are there articles too?

F: Yes, on different levels and some of them also have a video. If you are not sure about your English level, you can ask an online teacher.

M: (15) The only way I'd read an article is if I were to watch something about it. So I'm going to contact a teacher on the website and get started.

F: Great!
